Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2020–2025

DRAFT VERSION for COMMENT

Acknowledgements

The Department of Fire and Emergency Services (DFES) acknowledges the contribution received from our staff, volunteers and key stakeholders including members of the public. This feedback has been invaluable in the preparation of the Department of Fire and Emergency Services (DFES) Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2020-2025 and providing direction for the work we have ahead.

We also thank the Disability Services, Department of Communities for the guidance and support they provide.

Preparation of our Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2020-2025

To prepare this DFES Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2020-2025, we reviewed our most recent Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2015-2020. The review included the DFES Disability Access and Inclusion Plan Committee minutes, employee, volunteer and community consultation, examination of our progress reports, potential alignment with key internal and external documents including our new DFES Strategic Plan 2020-2024 and the DFES Workforce and Diversity Action Plan 2020-2022, and notable up-to-date developments and best practice in access and inclusion.

Through this process, we acknowledge it is evident that DFES demonstrates ongoing leadership and commitment towards the improvement of access and inclusion for people with disability to its services, information and facilities. The review also identified opportunities and challenges for DFES to enhance its access and inclusion for people with disability.

Commissioner's Message

The Department of Fire and Emergency Services (DFES) is committed to ensuring that people with disability, their families and carers are able to access emergency management services, facilities and information throughout the State without barriers - safeguarding that no individual is discriminated either directly or indirectly.

My leadership team and I are committed to ensuring our workplace and the services provided are accessible and inclusive to all Western Australians. Our highly skilled and capable personnel and volunteers are here to help protect and keep WA safe. We have a proud and strong sense of duty and care to be there for anyone when an emergency arises. We do not shy away from our responsibilities and obligations. We recognise that it is not an individual's impairment, but rather the barriers that exist in the community, that often limit an individual's ability to fully participate and in turn adversely, create a disabling environment.

Professionally and personally, disability affects all of us - our families, our friends and the communities we live in. Focussing on accessibility and inclusion is the right thing to do and benefits everyone in multiple ways.

Our DFES Workforce and Diversity Action Plan 2020-2022 sets targets for the employment of people with disability with an emphasis on building longer-term career opportunities. More recently, we have partnered and collaborated with a number of State and Commonwealth disability organisations to reflect our shared desire to support and empower people with disabilities to participate in every aspect of social, economic, and cultural life.

To advance this goal and realise our commitment, I am pleased to present the DFES Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2020-2025 that outlines key strategies to progress and improve our organisational accessibility and inclusivity for people with disability.

This plan will guide the department's dedicated efforts to provide people with disability the same opportunities to access the department's services, information, employment, facilities and events. To date, each of our plans has brought about notable incremental improvements yet there is more to do.

This is a dynamic document, so I encourage you provide ongoing feedback to our department to help improve our accessibility and inclusivity for people with disability, and incorporate the actions outlined into our day-to-day operations and achieve the overarching goal set out in this plan.

Darren Klemm AFSM
Commissioner

About Us

Established 1 November 2012, the Department of Fire and Emergency Services (DFES) performs a critical role coordinating emergency services for a range of natural disasters and emergency incidents threatening life and property.

Working in collaboration with Western Australian communities and an array of government agencies, DFES helps prevent, prepare for, respond to and recover from diverse hazards including fires, cyclones and floods to name a few.

DFES personnel and volunteers work closely particularly with the Western Australia Police Force and St John Ambulance, helping to coordinate and carry out search and rescue missions on land and at sea, and assist at road and traffic emergencies across the State. Additionally, DFES provides advice on emergency management issues to various local, State and national stakeholders.

Comprising of 1786 operational and corporate personnel, and supported by an extensive network of more than 26,200 volunteers, the workforce is engaged in the delivery of services across the State.

Our people have a wide range of experience and skills, and collectively they play an important part in making Western Australia a safer place to live. Together with our emergency management partners, we are responsible for delivering emergency management services for the largest jurisdiction in Australia, with a population of approximately 2.7 million.

DFES operates 24 hours per day, seven days per week, on land, in the air and by sea across 2.59 million square kilometres of our great State.

Our Vision

All Western Australians working together for a safer State.

Our Purpose

To achieve a safer Western Australia by enabling and protecting the community before, during and after emergencies.

Our Values

The values that underpin our operations and corporate intent - in ourselves and those we work with are:

Teamwork means we are strongest when we work together. We value the skills and attributes each person brings to the emergency management environment and the important role we all play.

Leadership is how we lead by example, striving to be the best, adopt innovation and keep the community at the forefront of all our decisions.

Trust means that we rely on each other, always treat each other with respect and act with integrity.

Commitment shows we are dedicated to delivering the best possible outcomes for our community, and we go above and beyond to be prepared for the unexpected. These values provide guidance for our everyday interactions and collaborations with our valued emergency services partners and the community.

The above elements are all enshrined in DFES' Strategic Plan 2020-2024 that includes our new corporate strategy, which will guide our delivery of services.

Our strategy is founded on three pillars, which include objectives and outcomes for WA Communities, Our People, and Emergency Management.

Disability – did you know?

Disability defined

A disability is defined as any continuing condition that restricts everyday activities. Disability can affect a person's capacity to communicate, interact with others, learn and get about independently. Disability is usually permanent but may be episodic.

Types of disability

Sensory - affecting vision and/or hearing.

Neurological - affecting a person's ability to control their movements for example, cerebral palsy.

Physical - affecting mobility and/or a person's ability to use their upper or lower body.
Intellectual - affecting a person's judgement, ability to learn and communicate.

Cognitive - affecting a person's thought processes, personality and memory resulting, for example, from an injury to the brain.

Psychiatric - affecting a person's emotions, thought processes and behaviour, for example, schizophrenia and manic depression.

Legislation

People with disability, their families and carers have the same rights as others to access services, buildings and information within the community. Their rights are protected by State and Commonwealth legislation that make it unlawful to discriminate against a person with disability and to ensure they have the same opportunities and choices as the rest of the community.

Public authorities (State Government agencies and Local Government Authorities) in Western Australia are required to have a Disability Access and Inclusion Plan (DAIP) under the Disability Services Act 1993 (amended 2004).

Other legislation underpinning access and inclusion includes the:

- Equal Opportunity Act 1984 (amended 1988) (Western Australia)
- Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (amended 2015) (Commonwealth)
- Convention on the Rights of Persons with a Disability (2007) (United Nations).

Additional legislation and policy relating to disability when planning for access and inclusion include the Building Code of Australia (BCA) that provides a set of minimum requirements for new buildings and renovations; and the Access to Premises Standard under the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA), that applies to new and upgraded public buildings.

The DDA provides protection to people with a disability by making it unlawful to discriminate against a person on the grounds of their disability. The definition of 'disability' in the DDA is very broad. It encompasses physical, intellectual, psychiatric, sensory, neurological and aural disorders, and also physical disfigurement and the presence in the body of an organism causing disease.

The definition covers both temporary and permanent disability and includes:

- people who have had a disability in the past (such as an episode of mental illness)
- people who may have a disability in the future (for example, where there is a family history of disability)
- people who are believed to have a disability (for example, if someone is thought to have HIV-AIDS).

The DDA describes both direct and indirect discrimination.

- Direct discrimination occurs where a person is treated less favourably because of a disability.
- Indirect discrimination occurs where there is a requirement or practice that is applied equally to persons with and without disabilities, but more severely impacts on a person with a disability, and that requirement or condition is unreasonable.

Whether unlawful discrimination has occurred can only be decided with reference to all the circumstances of the case.

As an employer, DFES has essential obligations to people with disability that extends to recruitment and selection processes, terms and conditions, and access to benefits such as promotion and training. DFES is obliged to provide reasonable adjustments for a staff member with a disability to enable them to carry out the inherent requirements of the job, as far as practical and where possible.

Reasonable Workplace Adjustments

DFES will provide staff with reasonable workplace adjustments, to ensure that all staff have equal opportunity to participate in all aspects of workplace life such as:

- recruitment processes
- performance of duties
- employment benefits and conditions
- professional and career development
- physical access to buildings and facilities
- information access
- a safe working environment.

Exceptions

DFES will implement all necessary measures and reasonable adjustments to enable equal access and opportunities for employees with disabilities except in the following instances where:

- provision of adjustments or measures would impose unjustifiable hardship on the department
- even with the provision of all reasonable adjustments, the employee remains unable to fulfil the inherent requirements of the position
- the employee with a disability has an infectious disease or other condition that requires isolation in order to protect their health and welfare or the health and welfare of others.

In determining 'unjustifiable hardship', all relevant circumstances of the particular case will be taken into account, as prescribed by the Disability Discrimination Act 1992.

'Inherent requirements' can be defined as:

- the ability to perform the tasks or functions which are a necessary part of the course/ job
- productivity and quality requirements
- the ability to work effectively in the team or other type of work organisation concerned
- the ability to work safely.

Our Challenge

Our challenge is to minimise the impact of disability and disadvantage by ensuring that DFES is accessible and inclusive to all Western Australians.

16.4%
of Western Australians identify themselves as having some form of disability

Disability affects one in five of the Western Australian population. A disability is any continuing condition that restricts everyday activities.

People with disability often experience difficulty accessing information, services, employment opportunities, facilities, and events. Research has shown that access and inclusion barriers are not exclusive to people with disability, and may be attributed to factors such as:

- low literacy levels
- low socio-economic status
- age
- discrimination in relation to gender, race and culture
- living in rural or remote areas.

According to the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) Survey of Disability, Ageing and Carers (2018), nearly four and a half million people (17.7%) of Australians identify themselves as having some form of disability.

In Western Australia, this figure is 16.4% of the total population. The survey also found that approximately 11% of Australians are involved in caring for a person with a disability or an older person.

It is important that at DFES we do everything within our control to identify and remove the barriers, as many barriers as possible, that exclude people from accessing our services, information, employment, facilities and events and therefore, minimise the impact of disability at many levels and layers. From an employment perspective, concerted effort by DFES to ensure appropriate workplace adjustments and services tailored to each person with disability are in place, will reduce the restrictions experienced by many people with disability.

Our Consultation

Consultation, Collaboration and Research

To inform the development of this DFES Disability and Access Inclusion Plan 2020-2025, consultation, collaboration and research took place. Feedback from our DFES personnel, internal and external stakeholders, and members of the public was gathered and included in this important document. We were especially grateful for the additional feedback received from our DFES employees and volunteers with lived experience and the Disability Services, Department of Communities.

To identify best practice in the disability planning and design, desktop research was undertaken to review relevant government and non-government disability and access inclusion plans as well as keystone documents that emphasised the importance of universal/inclusive design principles. Universal/inclusive design focuses on the wide spectrum of abilities. In essence, this approach aims to exceed minimum standards to meet the needs of the greatest number of people.

Seven principles of universal design

Principle 1: Equitable Use

Principle 2: Flexibility in Use

Principle 3: Simple and Intuitive Use

Principle 4: Perceptible Information

Principle 5: Tolerance for Error

Principle 6: Low Physical Effort

Principle 7: Size and Space for Approach and Use

Source: Wolfgang F. E. Preiser, Elaine Ostroff, Universal Design Handbook (2010).

According to the University of Cambridge (2020)

Every design decision has the potential to include or exclude customers.

Inclusive design emphasises the contribution that understanding user diversity makes to informing these decisions, and thus to including as many people as possible. User diversity covers variation in capabilities, needs and aspirations.

Source: University of Cambridge

An examination of our earlier DFES Disability and Access Inclusion Plans was undertaken to identify our strengths thus far and opportunities for development to support people with disability at work and in the community.

Our consultation process included:

- a staff and volunteer consultation process took place between August and September 2020 as follows:
 - a notification was published on the DFES intranet and the Volunteer Hub website encouraging all DFES staff and volunteers to participate in an anonymous DFES Diversity, Access and Inclusion Survey online survey feedback on DFES accessibility and inclusivity for people with disability
 - an email was sent for circulation to each Command inviting staff and volunteers feedback on the draft DFES Disability and Access Inclusion Plan 2020-2025.
- DFES staff and volunteers, and members of the public are also encouraged to provide feedback to the Human Resource and Safety Directorate by telephone, email, in person or by submitting the DFES Diversity, Access and Inclusion Feedback Form.
- an advertisement was produced to invite comments from the public on how the DFES could improve access and inclusion for people with disability. The advertisement was distributed in various formats. These included:
 - an advertisement placed in The West Australian newspaper on Wednesday xx month 2020
 - a notice of the advertisement was published on the DFES public website Wednesday xx month 2020
 - all documentation was available in different formats upon request.

Consultation findings

Feedback through an advertisement in The West Australian newspaper resulted in xx responses comments received from the public.

The internal consultation process resulted in xx responses comments received from completed. The consultation highlighted achievements and progress results from the previous Disability and Access Inclusion Plan 2015-2020; as well as direction for this important document.

Our Plan

People with disability have the same rights as others to participate in all aspects of community life. This plan focuses on and reinforces the importance of being mindful in terms of the planning, consulting and delivery of services to people with disability.

DFES strives to make sure that all people in Western Australia have equitable and inclusive access to our services, facilities, information, employment opportunities and events regardless of an individual's abilities or differences. This is our promise and we are confident that with awareness raising activities, training opportunities and appropriate tools our DFES staff together with our extensive network of volunteers will cooperate and work together to achieve the goal of this plan.

Our previous DFES Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2015-2020 resulted in a range of initiatives that lead to improved access to services, information and facilities for people with disability.

Providing equal and equitable access for people with disability to its information, services and facilities continues to be a high priority for DFES.

This new DFES Disability Access and Inclusion Plan, effective from 1 October 2020 to 31 December 2025, will continue to ensure that at work are our actions and not just our words, facilitating better inclusion and access for people with disability, their families and carers.

Our Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2020-2025 focuses on the ways that we will be mindful in terms of the planning, consulting and delivery of our services for people with disability. As DFES collaborates and consults with a broad range of subject matter experts, service providers and organised groups including advocates, unions, business and consumers to deliver our work, we will ensure that they too, understand the importance of accessibility and inclusivity.

Furthermore, this plan will guide and assist us to meet all our obligations under the Disability Services Act 1993, the WA Equal Opportunity Act 1984 and the Commonwealth Disability Discrimination Act 1992.

Access and inclusion means different things to different people. A number of factors, including the degree and type of disability, which can vary considerably between individuals, affects a person's ability to access information, services and facilities. Therefore, processes and outcomes for access and inclusion cannot be prescriptive, and must take into account the diverse needs of individuals and the nature, strengths, priorities and resources of a community. The common elements of access and inclusion are the removal or reduction of barriers to participation in the activities and functions of a community, by ensuring that information, services and facilities are accessible to people with various disabilities (Disability Services Commission 2016).

People with disability have the same rights as others to participate in all aspects of community life

Our plan also compliments the DFES Workforce and Diversity Action Plan 2020-2022 that emphasises specifically on improved participation, inclusion, employment and career development within our organisation by valuing workplace inclusion and diversity. The DFES Workforce and Diversity Action Plan 2020-2022 is designed to build an inclusive culture where:

- individual differences are respected
- diverse skills and knowledge are valued and utilised
- opportunities are available for all
- engagement and partnership with stakeholders is effective
- the voice of our communities are represented.

The DFES Workforce and Diversity Action Plan 2020-2022 focuses on a cohesive set of actions underpinned by enduring universal/inclusive principles. In particular, this Action Plan serves as a guide for DFES to realise good practices and systems of attracting, recruiting, retaining and developing our workforce of which people with disability are a key focal group.

Our Commitment

Our overarching commitment is that anyone who seeks information, needs emergency services, visits, volunteers or works for DFES is provided with equal and equitable opportunities, and may assume the rights and responsibilities enjoyed by all people within the community. To help ensure that barriers to access and inclusion are identified and redressed as quickly as possible, we will consult and work with people with disability and relevant disability support to minimise the impact of these barriers. Furthermore, we will take all reasonable measures to ensure our plan is implemented purposefully and meaningfully.

We are committed to achieving seven desired outcomes as specified in Schedule 3 of the Disability Services Act 1992.
