

Video Transcript: VMRS Cadets in Broome

[Matilda Kenworthy, Broome VMRS] So I first got involved with my dad, being always at the Sea Rescue base, going out on SARs [search and rescue]. So yeah that just kind of made me think, oh well I could do that for the community too and it be a good experience.

>> [Josh Linton, Broome VMRS] It's fun, it's rewarding, it's, something that you can put in your resume and be proud of saying that you're a volunteer. You know, people really like that.

>> [Matilda] Certainly wasn't what I was expecting when I first joined up. There's a lot more things involved in it but it's not in a bad way it's in a good way. There's so many new opportunities and experiences that we get to do and learn about.

>> [Josh] It's really good to have the more experienced 'oldies' around and we work really well together, on the boats, at training, and in the base.

>> [Matilda] Our friends kind of don't know too much about Sea Rescue so, I know I usually post things on Snapchat. It's just so they know that kind of Sea Rescue is something that's definitely out there, and is for youth, that they can do it.

>> [Josh] Yeah I think it's important for, why, our friends to realise that volunteering is something we need in this world and, you know, we try, try and encourage everyone to get down and at least have a shot at going in on the boat or, helping out somewhere along the lines.

>> [Matilda] I definitely say come do it because it's such a great experience. And, like you might think that there's not too much involved with it 'cause we're young and we might not do as much as the older people can do, but that's not true at all. [Laughs] We definitely do a lot of things here and we learn a lot as well, which is kind of the main part of it, it's just learning so that we can be the next generation of Sea Rescue volunteers.
